

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a directional aerator having a float, an uptake pipe extending through the float, and a means for pulling a flow of wastewater into the uptake pipe. The wastewater flow is vertically displaced upwardly through the uptake pipe. At least one pair of baffles deflects the flow of wastewater upon discharge. A method of aerating a fluid is also disclosed.